American Soldiers Reported Captured By Berlin Office?

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.]

Berlin, Nov. 3.—The capture of American soldiers by a German reconnoitering party is announced by the war office. The statement says it occurred on the Rhine-Marne canal as a result of reconnoitering that the North American soldiers were brought in.

No Confirmation.

Washington, Nov. 3.—None of General Pershing's dispatches received up to this afternoon say anything about any American troops having been captured by the Germans, but officials here have no reason to doubt the Berlin announcement. Capture, killing and wounding of American troops on the battle front, they say, will be one of the inevitable fortunes of war. Moreover, the German high command is apparently more eager to capture some Americans, and recently the commander on the west front offered special money and other inducements to the first German trooper who took a soldier in the American uniform.

Reports Deaths.

General Pershing reported to the war office the deaths of two privates from natural causes, and the other, a Milwaukee man, from a gun shot, reported as possibly accidental.

Private Vana of the infantry died on November 1st of blood poisoning as the result of a gunshot wound, possibly accidental. His mother, Mrs. May Vana, lives at 431 12th street, Milwaukee.

Private Ralph W. Wheeler, machine gun battalion, son of Fred Wheeler of West Morland, N. H., died Oct. 31 of natural causes.

U. S. SOLDIERS TELL THRILLING STORIES

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The American Army in France, Nov. 3—Some of the American soldiers who have just been released after service in the trenches have thrilling stories to tell on returning to the bivouacs. On clear days especially German snipers became active and bullets went singing overhead. American infantrymen were to attend any sniper who became active and more than one of them will slay Americans no more.

The game of "snipe the sniper" was highly popular and the only complaint of the regulars was that there was not enough rifle shooting to satisfy the infantrymen. Several of the soldiers said they went out to fight but did not get enough. There was no scarcity of expert riflemen when a sniper started in.

Probably the Germans have only retreated across the Aisne river about thirteen miles or they may have started on a retreat paralleling that of last March when they finally fell back before Anglo-French pressure from Reims to Cismon. General Hindenburg's successive line last week reached the Aisne canal eight miles southwest of Laon and captured more than 12,000 prisoners. From the position gained the French could and did bombard the Germans clinging to the hilly strip between the Chemin des Dames and the Aisne. The hills on the northern bank of the Aisne were as high as those on the southern and the Crown Prince may have gone back to the line of the river Ardon which runs west of Laon and joins the river north of Chavigny. It is improbable the Germans did not retire across the Aisne as a worse position than on top of the ridge.

The retirement might include Leon, the reputed attack of the Hindenburg line in March, but if the front of the Aisne is given up a line from St. Quentin through LaFere & Laon, and Montaigu to Newchatelet-Fur-Aisne along the railroad between LaFere and Newchatelet might offer a good halting place. A retirement only to the northern bank of the Aisne between Chavigny and Clamecy might not effect the line from Chavigny north to St. Quentin but further retreat would involve the present line as far as LaFere.

On the eastern end of the Chemin des Dames if the retirement is not made quickly there is a probability of a French blow in Champagne which might straighten out the entire front from Châlons to Verdun.

General Cadorna has halted on the eastern bank of the Tagliamento momentarily to face the Austro-Germans. The eastern bank of the river, Berlin, has been cleared of Italians. From the Fella here the Tagliamento turns westward to near Tolmizza to the Adriatic.

In Italy, Italian guns are bombing the invaders along the new line but apparently no attempt has been made by the Austro-Germans to force a crossing of the Carnic Alps in an attempt to turn the flank of the Tagliamento. Reports from Switzerland say the Germans are hurrying troops and guns into Trentino. This might mean either to strengthen the Austrians there or to start a drive south from Trent in an attempt to cut off the Italians now on the Venetian plains.

Von Hertling In.

Count Von Hertling is announced officially from Berlin has been appointed imperial chancellor in succession to Dr. George Michaelis who resigned to another but unnamed official position. The new chancellor apparently has the support of all the socialist and conservative. The socialists will give an active opposition until the Count's policies are known more clearly.

French Advance.

Paris, Nov. 3.—The French are advancing between the Oise canal and the region of Corbehy and have reached the south bank of the Aisne river, the war office announces.

Germans Retire.

The Germans have retreated to the north bank of the river. The bridges across the Aisne were destroyed by Germans. Since Oct. 28 the French have captured 422 guns and 720 machine guns.

Noted Russian General Says That Eng-

in Naval Fight—Predicts Resumption of Fighting.

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.]

London, Nov. 3.—Most of the morning newspapers print Premier Kerensky's interview with the Associated Press completely, but comment is given by the Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Telegraph in London writes: "Premier Kerensky's statement seems to have been taken a little too seriously in some quarters. It even has been construed as a hint that Russia is toying with the idea of a separate peace. This should not be allowed to establish itself. Premier Kerensky wished to indicate facts. It is true that Russia is all worn out. The essential fact is that what Russia had given is Can Fight."

General Kurko of the Russian army who arrived recently in England from Russia in an interview in the Daily Express says Premier Kerensky showed a lack of political sense in blaming the British fleet for not entering the Baltic Sea.

He declared entry was not only impossible but could not have been carried out in time to prevent the Germans landing in the Gulf of Riga. General Kurko agreed with Kerensky that Russia is exhausted from the fighting but adds that she should be able to undertake her share of the fighting.

Too Freely.

Petrograd, Nov. 3.—Russian troops in the Vishnev sector yesterday franchised with the German troops, the Russian war office announced today.

Vishnev is a town on the eastern front southwest of Vilna and north of the Neman River.

Expect Attack.

Petrograd, Nov. 3.—General Tchernissoff, commander in chief of the northern front, who has just made a trip to Tpritzrager said the Germans were more active during the last days in which the first contingent of Americans were in the trenches. The Germans shelled the back areas and approached, putting shrapnel and high explosive shells in the direction of the trenches and battery positions. Artillery fire, however, was not accomplished.

HOLLAND CARES FOR WOUNDED SOLDIERS

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—With a warning that inflation already had been checked, the national reserve board, which is the national committee on financing the war here, said that American business must not undertake to carry the war as an "extra" but must exercise the vision necessary to see the great changes in economic organization essential to victory.

Culver was called to Washington where he gave valuable assistance as wireless expert to the Signal Corps radio company of seven or eight men, who were recently called to Camp Gordon, Georgia, was recruited under his direction.

U. S. SOLDIER COSTS FOURTEEN TIMES AS MUCH AS GERMANY'S

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Nov. 3.—Germany is putting its men into the field for the same amount of money which the United States is paying for a single fighting man according to calculations of government experts. They said the same general proposition was true of maintaining the army in the field or in other words America must raise $14.30 where the enemy nation raises only $1 for the purpose of carrying on the war. The difference is due to the higher pay of the United States soldiers and greater cost of supplies in this country. The contrast is used as a text for the admonition that resources would not win the war alone but strict economy was necessary.

LEGISLATURE FAVERS APPOINTMENT POWER

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Nov. 3.—The consensus of opinion among political leaders here is that the legislature will appoint a United States senator to fill out a part of the unexpired term of the late Paul O. Husting will be given to Gov. Philipp by the legislature which will be convened here next month. Counting the socialists, some of the democrats and a few of the so-called progressives against the plan, the governors friends believe there will be a working majority to carry out the plan.

The appointment, under the governor's plan, will be a temporary one. The office will be filled by the general election next fall. Politicians here point out that while the governor will not be a candidate for the temporary appointment, there is nothing in his statement that will preclude his becoming a candidate for the office at the general election next fall.

Under this view of the matter the governor's forces will be able to put a ticket in the field for the state election, permit Governor Philipp to serve out his term as executive, and allow Gov. Kirschbaum to run as a candidate for the United States senatorship.

These speculations have led to many changes as to whom the governor might appoint for the one year term as United States senator. While no statement has been given out by Chief Justice J. B. Winslow, for whom there seems to be a general demand that he accept the appointment, the opinion here is that Justice Whistow will not accept.

This contingency has given rise to the belief that possibly Justice R. D. Marshall, whose term on the bench expires Jan. 1, might be proffered the honor. Starting on the circuit bench in 1870, he was appointed to the supreme court in 1898. Justice Marshall is still active. He has taken up his home in Madison. Some of his friends suggest that his appointment to this high office would meet with approval. His position on the war has been in accord with the administration at Washington.

The name of George Lines of Milwaukee, who was mentioned here, has been rejected.

The governor's statement that he will not appoint a partisan has eliminated many of the possibilities that have been mentioned heretofore and the choice will probably settle upon a man who has not been active in politics, but who has a strong reputation in the state.

There will not be a full membership in the legislature this time and according to present plans there is no intention of calling the separate districts to fill vacancies. Senator A. J. Pullen has gone to the front. The seat of Senator Frank Regus, Milwaukee, is vacant. Assemblyman Evans has gone on the state board of control and Assemblyman Campbell, Milwaukee, is with the navy.

SINN FEIN SITUATION CAUSE DUBLIN UNREST

London, Nov. 3.—Concerning the political situation in Ireland, the Daily Mail says: "There is reason to believe that a feeling of disquiet has developed in Dublin over the Sinn Fein situation. Professor De Valera has been appointed chairman by Secretary of War Daniels jointly, is raising three dollars for each soldier and sailor and a national campaign is now in progress. In which the patriotic Americans are asked to do their bit" in this way to help win the war.

The Tagblatt admits there is danger of the present military situation breaking up on the first occasion in the Reichstag when the centrists would surely follow the "centralist chancellor" in the party interest.

AVIATORS COLLIDE; BOTH ESCAPE INJURY

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.]

Paris, Nov. 3.—A report just received from the French front demonstrates the growing skill with which birds are becoming endowed by war practice. Two French aeroplanes collided head-on thousands of feet above the ground, battered and torn, tore themselves apart during a plumb-line plunge eastward and maneuvered by skillful handling into a sort banding around a group of trees. Neither pilot was injured.

Two or three years ago this accident would have been fatal to both aviators," said an American aviator in Paris today. The American was an eye witness to the thrilling scene.

"A Boche machine indiscreetly came into our lines," he said. "A young French pilot, I think, was at the same time. So intent were they on taking favorable positions above the enemy that they forgot one another and crashed with a noise that was plainly heard on the ground. They stuck together an instant and fell apart. The wings of both machines were badly crumpled. One slid away into a wide circle, gliding a hundred yards, and then more toward the ground. The other then began to execute a series of loops and dives, and looked like both of them were done. While everyone below was holding his breath the machines began to come under control. Thirty seconds later both were wobbling slowly earthward under almost perfect control, each aviator seem to have the same idea of making a safe landing in a small wood nearby. A minute later the machines were gently settling down in the branches. Aside from a few inevitable scratches both pilots were none the worse."

Washington, Nov. 3.—Regulations to pave the way for removal of alcohol from beer for industrial purposes and concerning the residue into soft drinks, were issued today by Commissioner C. Roper, commissioner of internal revenue. Beer may be piped from a brewery to a distillery without payment of the usual removal tax, but a wall without an opening must be constructed between the two establishments if under the same roof. After the alcohol is removed and denatured according to law, the residue may be piped back into the brewery without tax payment, to be made into soft drinks.

SAILORS LOST WHEN LAUNCH FOUNDRED

Washington, Nov. 3.—The navy department has issued this statement: "The navy department announces that on October 30 the pletket boat of the United States S. Michigan foundered. Apparently the entire crew was lost. The finding of the bodies of three of the crew and the failure to find any other trace of the boat or occupants leads the department to believe all hands were lost."

Copenhagen, Nov. 3.—Chancellor Count von Herdtling evidently will have behind him at the start at least the united support of all parties in the Reichstag, except the conservatives and radical socialists. He will be started on his way with a formal vote of confidence after his speech outlining the policies. According to the chancellor's organ, the Germania, the Reichstag will be convened in mid-November, especially to listen to the declaration of the new head of the government. An interpellation will be on the occasion because the rules of the Reichstag permit the members to register their opinions of the government after an interpellation debate.

"Y" WAR FUND NEEDS
$30,000 IN COUNTY
TO AID THE CAUSE

Monster Luncheon at Local "Y"
Tuesday Noon to Discuss and Outline the County's Campaign.

What will mark the opening of Rock county's campaign to raise $30,000 for the Y. M. C. A. war fund, will be the big noon luncheon to be given at the local association building next Tuesday at 12:30, at which Captain John T. Stone of Camp Grant will give a rousing address telling of the "Y" work at the Rockford cantonment. Captain Stone, who is now in charge of all work here, is a most forcible speaker and all who attend can be assured of hearing a very interesting and inspiring talk.

Invitations have been mailed to over four hundred of the county's most progressive men, and from present indications it appears that at least three hundred of them will attend the luncheon. However, the attendance will not be limited to just those who receive invitations, but everyone who is interested in this great work will be welcome.

$35,000 has been fixed as the minimum amount to be raised by the nation in the interests of the enlisted men in national guard camps, and the amount of each county must raise at least $30,000, which will mean that Janeville's quota will be about $10,000.

Secretary Steiner, head of the benefit association, has been appointed county executive secretary for the campaign, which will be officially opened November 1, and will continue throughout the year. Mr. Steiner is a most energetic worker and will make his headquarters during the campaign in A. E. Matheson's law office.

Mr. Steiner has organized the work in the county and a little later teams will be made up, to do the work of rounding up the subscriptions.

Mr. Steiner, in speaking of the Rock county campaign this morning stated:

"For years the Y. M. C. A. is doing for the boys in khaki, this country would experience but little trouble in filling its quota. It is our plan to let every one know about this great work within the next two weeks. If we accomplish this task, we are confident that Janeville and Rock county will be among the top five cities in the country.

If each individual gives as much as he possibly can afford, and he most certainly should, the thirty thousand mark will be reached before November 15."

At the meeting Tuesday noon, no solicitations of money will be made. The campaign will merely be outlined and explained, and the tremendous importance of the drive will be emphasized. A nominal charge of forty cents a plate will be made to pay the expenses of the luncheon.

Three million dollars was raised for the Y. M. C. A. work last spring, but the increased war work, and the real need of the "Y" in the cantonments here and in France, account for another five million to the front to carry on the work from the middle of the summer until now. At the big national meeting held in New York in September, it was decided that, large as the sun was, thirty-five millions was the budget that would have to be adopted to properly carry on the work until June 30, 1918.

DRAFT DAY SERVICE AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Special services have been planned for the Christian church on Sunday morning for draft day program. The exercises will begin with the Sunday school session at 10 o'clock, when original features will be given by the children and by the Boy Scouts. There will also be unveiled at this time a "roll of honor" containing the names of the young men who have gone from the church into various units of army service. The sermon at the regular church service will be on "The Church in War Time." Special music will be rendered on both occasions. On Monday evening the Women's club of the Sunday school will entertain the men of the society at a supper, held in the room of the church. A special program will be given in the evening.

Caldwell & Son Ship Thirteen Pure

James Caldwell and son, whose farms are six miles northwest of Janeville, shipped thirteen head of their pure bred Shorthorns to D. B. Smith, Mission Hill, South Dakota, this week. Their shipment consists of four heifers and nine cattle, and are to be added to Mr. Smith's large herd. This is the first shipment Mr. Smith has made from Rock County, so the fact that he would come back here for more stock at this time proves, beyond a doubt, that Rock County Shorthorns are ranking good.

I. C. Caldwell, of the firm of Caldwell & Son, was in Chicago yesterday and purchased two Shorthorn heifers of the very best breeding, one being from the farm of Mr. Ann of Lancaster, and sired by Carter Groomman, an imported Scotch animal.

FIND THREE TIRES AND HORSE BLANKET IN BOX CAR

Three automobile tires and one horse blanket are now in the possession of the chief of police as a result of a trip to Beloit recently made near the Martin St. P. railroad coal yard. Information regarding the articles was received by the chief last evening and the trip revealed the articles. Where the articles came from is unknown, but it is believed that some thief while being closely followed put them there or else the articles came from some other town along with a train of freight cars. Two of the tires are in fair condition and the other is in fair condition.

Efforts will be made to trace the car so that the tires may be returned to the owners.

THE EASTERN STAR
STUDY CLASS MEET

A program showing the versatility of the Eastern Star Study class was given on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Holt and Miss Robinson on South Main street. A couple of delightful piano selections, given by Mrs. Loofboer, were opening numbers. They were by McDowell, Mrs. B. went sang "Life's Mirror," and Mrs. Sibley of Milwaukee gave two vocal numbers—"Quaint Little Old Fashioned Home" and "The Sunshine of Her Smile." Mrs. Sherer told the story of a courtship of 1776, in a pianologue, which was very enjoyable. Mrs. Holzapfel gave a humorous reading by Lillian Bell entitled "Father's Talking Now." Unsuspected talents were bidden by a quartet of members who sang some patriotic selections, among them being "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "Knitting." The ladies of the quartet were Mesdames Benewels, Stevens, Garbutt and Curtis. Two guests from Madison were present, Mrs. Waite and Mrs. Wightman. MID-WEST BOWLING CONGRESS NOV. 16

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 3.—Entries close Nov. 6 for the eleventh annual convention of the Middle West Bowling Association, which will be held here for fourteen days, beginning Nov. 16.

Participation of more than 225 five-man teams already is assured, according to George E. Hamilton, secretary of the organization, while numerous other teams are expected to enter just inside the time limit.

Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Oklahoma, Colorado and South Dakota are the states principally represented in the association, but teams outside the territory have been entered, including at least five from New York.

Last year, when the tourney was held in St. Louis, there were 175 five-man teams, 300 doubles, 616 individuals and 500 all event entries, a record for the organization, so a new mark at this point probably will be set here.

The proximity of the Camp Dodge training camp will allow soldiers bowling teams to enter the competition, and if private performances on local alleys are a criterion, many of the national army men are likely to be successful when they "go over the top" for prize money.

Several cities already have opened campaigns for the 1918 tournament. Kansas City, Mo., was one of the first to put in a bid, and Omaha, St. Louis and Sioux City, Ia., also have their hats in the ring.

BADGER HOMECOMING DRAWS LARGE CROWD

Madison, Nov. 3.—Wisconsin's history is in the making at Madison today. The greatest day of the year for the university dawned ascetically with the Badger camp all prepared for the annual football game between Wisconsin and Minnesota. The event was commemorated with a "homecoming" of student and hundreds of other visitors.

A military dedication of the new stadium at Camp Randall also marked the day. The day assumed all the earmarks of a military celebration—a patriotic rally of Wisconsin's past and present students. Military and national emblems decorated the great field for the gridiron battle, which promises to give an intense struggle of the Flanders front.

Flares and torches with a big camp fire on the lower campus last night inaugurated the program. Hundreds gathered about the fire to pay tribute to their alma mater. Today trains brought crowds from all parts of the state. Those in charge of the celebration are:

Cecil L. Holman, Fond du Lac, chairman; H. Parker Weeks, Davenport, in-assistant chairman; Mr. Eugene Brossa, Columbus; James Peterson, La Crosse; Miss Lutie Nelson, Racine; George Willis, Rochester; Frank Tucker, Milwaukee; Miss Eleanor Stanchfield, Fond du Lac; William Chandler, Waupaca; Carl Harris, Chippewa Falls; Lawrence Hall, Madison; James Richardson, Fort Atkinson; William Baldwin, Boise, Idaho; Ellis Stokdyk, Surgeon Bay; Allen Slichter, Waukesha; Miss Dorothy Bell, Winona; Mr. Meade Morris, Monroe; Clarence Journals, Kenosha; Ernest Josephson, Superior; Stephen Fox, Racine; Edward Pritchett, Milwaukee; Miss Ruth Steele, Redding, and Frank Birch, Fond du Lac.

HUNTERS PREDICT PLENTY OF DEER FOR THIS SEASON

Menomonie, Mich., Nov. 3.—Hunters who wade into the north woods this year will find plenty of game, according to reports brought here by Deputy Game Wardens Kell, Rough Lechner, who recently returned from a trip through Menomonie, Marquette and Dickinson counties.

The game wardens reported many deer, asserting the season as many as fourteen in one day. The increased numbers of the herds is attributed to the opening law by the deputies and the belief that the new increase in bounties on wolves will aid in the task of conserving deer in this section. All reported seeing few birds this year, but they said rabbits were plentiful.

Giant's players discovered that bat while Schalk is behind the bat stand, giving a little concentration. It's just like listening to a drum corps when you come to bat with Gus Schalk catching," said one of them. "He is always whistling. All through the game he whistles at his favorite tunes in a high shrill tone and it doesn't pay too much to his harmony or you'll forget why you came up to bat. Once in a while Schalk will vary the whistling with a little yodeling or at times he will burst out song. Then he fills in intervals by talking to himself in a way that the player can easily overhear. I can't figure how he keeps it up, because he works it on every player throughout the game."

USHER OFFERS HIS ADVICE FREELY ON POLITICAL SUBJECT

By Ellis B. Usher.

Milwaukee, Nov. 3.—The Hon. John Whitehead of Janesville was in the city Thursday to attend a meeting of the Loyalty Legion, and it took the liberty of giving him a bit of advice about the governor's "rise" to his recent remarks on that gentleman's unpopularity for the senatorial election, as well as the governor's confession with the council and took that judgment will be rendered. He doesn't suppose he will take any advice, few people do, but like salvation, it's free.

The governor proposes to play the catch-up in the senatorial pond and the water is going to be all black with inky substances, if he can control the legislature, which is not at all improbable. Men who want Wisconsin to stand up to the German bunch in the open, and the quicker the better. If he thinks they can avoid the recoil by trying to postpone the day of reckoning, they will learn more as time passes.

Meanwhile the question of candidate need not be discussed until the governor appears, as he will, if he controls things. Then they can, without doubt, be discussed.

An autobiography is the only genuine romance. Fiction is at best a feeble reflection of real men and women, their desires, their hopes and fears, their likes and dislikes, and their achievements. I know of no novel so full of substantial, enduring, manly grandeur as General Grant's Memoirs. There is nothing in literature more steeped in patos, more enveloped in its record of human struggle against about all possible odds of low birth and lowly outlook than that wonderful tale of ambitious persistence, force and uphill struggle told by Booker Washington in "Up From Slavery." Such books surpass artist, no matter how delicate, who borrows colors for a composite character. They breathe true air and soar beyond the limits of the finite. True inspiration is the real article, and they recite such wonder tales as once passed as fond love, and which in this more sophisticated age are rarer, less redolent of fancy and table, less true as well. I have just been reading a book of autobiography that tells the tales of one small boy of long ago, in La Crosse county, and in other places farther west. Hamlin Garland, when he wrote "Main Travel Roads," nearly thirty years ago, described the scenes and people of Green's Coulee in the town of Onalaska. It was the limned in master strokes as to the scenery, and brushed in savage bitterness and resentment as to the pioneer hardships of the people. In his recent book, an autobiographical volume, "A Son of the Middle Border," he has traversed much the same ground as in his earlier sketches, but with a touch for more tender and an insight for finer values that has come with his riper years, wider view of life and greater breadth of experience. There is still a touch of resentful recollection in his life story, but that was all lacking thirty years ago, has begun to mellow, to receding panoply of boyhood and youth and throw over it the halo of parenthood tenderness that is one of the blessed attributes of passing years. I knew the boy well, scarcely knew the man, but the real person story deals with scenes of which I was a part, as well as he. He does not, even in this later and very moving human tale, give proper credit to his blood, to his neighbors, much less to himself. To start with, the heritage of pioneer existence which he quarreled with so much futility, in his earlier work, was the hall mark of his blood. His sire came from Maine. That was a frontier state even in its own time, and its seed of adventurous lumbermen have hunted to the Pacific coast the lordly tree that blazons the great name of that commonwealth. My own grandfathers was a lumberman on the Saco. One of his great grandsons followed the calling into far northwestern Canada. The breed is the frontier. I have known many of them in Wisconsin, where they opened every pine forest to the sun, then—on to Oregon. The Garlands were farmers, but the boy has doubled the trail to become a literary man. Among the pioneer boys, his early neighbors about West Salem, I recall one who died in the Civil War, another who was a bishop of the M. E. church. Another who is one of the best known newspaper managers in the country. One has been in Congress, and so on. It was not an unproductive soil, and Mr. Garland himself proves it. His life story is its message for many boys of today and it may, I hope, be sacrificed to them. He, like many another Yankee who has felt the cold steel of youthful struggle, will probably spoil his own boy by going to the other extreme. That is the old way. The Yankee blood becomes deteriorated. The Puritan soul needs a fight to keep it in full vigor. Well, it is a mighty interesting book to me and I have more regard for the author and his literary workmanship than for his life story.

It is worth any Wisconsin boy's time as a picture of our life fifty years ago, and it will moisten the eye of many a pioneer of the second and third generation, for in it their lives, as well as the author's, is depicted.

While writing of books and pioneer history I wish to refer to the new mark of excellence that has stamped this year's publications of the Wisconsin State Historical Society, and to commend them to Wisconsin people. The superintendent, Mr. Quafe, like Mr. Garland, is a child of the middle border, with the sympathetic taste for his work that the fact suggests. To that he adds the scholarly training that makes true account of places and of farms. The duty of caring for the greatest portion of the west is evidently in good hands and the newly inaugurated Historical Review indicates that the many sided possibilities of the office of superintendent are all to be considered. Too much of our historical writing smacks of pedantry and lacks flavor, or it goes to the extreme of merely weary and pointless pioneer reminiscence. Mr. Quafe is sure to send the good wishes of all thoughtful friends of the history of this region and this country.

The Loyalty Legion has been advertising itself and getting into action recently. Within the past two weeks three speakers of national renown, ex-Ambassador Gerard, Clarence Barbour of Chicago, and Charles Edward Russell, who was a member of the Root commission, had all spoken here and at other points in the state under the auspices of the Legion. President Roosevelt, Vice President Coolidge of Racine and W. A. Hayes of this city, chairman of the executive committee, have been getting their hands in and the organization within a few days has flocked in parts of the state with a campaign for patriotic discussion that will interest every man in the state, and the one big job so far attempted, of settling patriotic pledges to send to Washington, has been progressing finely.

If Clark Griffith had never done anything else in baseball he should be celebrated for being the greatest discoverer of first basemen. Griff has discovered and largely developed Hal Chase, Chic Gandil, Dick Hobzil and Joe Judge. And as good first sackers are none too plenty Griff may be pleased with the record.

Tom Longboat, the celebrated Indian runner, twice booted unofficially reported killed in action at the battle of the Somme, is still alive. Capt. Tom Flanagan, Longboat's manager, who went over there with him and has recently returned to Canada, has had a letter from the Indian reporting good health and spirits and expressing indignation that some Indian or other in the United States has been representing himself as Tom Longboat.

Audrey Felsch, world's series hero, was the recipient of many cheers and such like when he showed up in Milwaukee, his home town. A large gathering of enthusiastic friends assembled to greet him and give him the hearty mitt, but Felsch stole home at an unexpected hour and avoided the brass base and all the trimmings. When discovered the next day he was the strong silent with admirers and slapping on the back till rheumatic. Was then motored down to Chicago in his new cap when the White Sox were gathering to accept their medals $7,000 in payment for their world series services and when he came home again the pals were there once more to sing and cheer, being a world's series hero seems to be a pleasant circumstance.

Branch Rickey announces that either Ira Thomas, the catching vet, or Johnny Evers will be the Cardinals new manager. It appears that the management favors Thomas while the fans are eager for Evers. Either looks like a fair bet, but neither will scare the rest of the league.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS DO THEIR SHARE ON FARMS

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.

Marquette, Nov. 3.—The first "draft" of Marquette school boys from farms of the county has returned and reports show that the boys worked just as hard to do their share at home as the boys "over there." In all fifty-eight were excused from their studies to help farmers gather crops, mostly potatoes, before freezing weather.

The farmers say the boys took as much interest gathering potatoes as soldiers take in getting a shot at Germans across "No Man's Land." All the boys are willing to return to the farms if further help is needed.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

A man is the sum of his ancestors,
plus
Or minus what they may have been;
He may choose from this multitudin-ous host.

And choosing will lose or win;

He may be as good as the best of them;

Or may easily be as bad
As the very worst, if that is his will,
Like some great great great grand-
dad.

But it's just this little imperious plus
That determines the something more Than a grandma had or a bad grand-
dad.

Through the long long years before
An open door to the infinite,
Is flung wide for him
Than to any stumbling ancestor
In that backward pathway dim.

He can choose for himself what he wishes to be—
If he sets for himself the tasks
He is master of his destiny;
What more can a grandfather ask?

—Elizabeth Parson.

In every well regulated family the mother is proud of the head of the household and "Johnnie" is often reminded that his father is a model of perfection. "Try to be as good a man
as your father," is a frequent admonition, and the boy is satisfied to try until he discovers some of his father's failings, and then ambition protects him to go his dad one better or one worse as the case may be.

There is something subtle about the love of a good woman for the man whose fortune she is sharing for the long journey. The vow which she took when they joined hands at the altar was to her a sacred obligation, and stimulated by a loving heart there is no thought of its ever becoming a bodily one.

Many men, whose manly rating is below par, are so flattered and exalted by the atmosphere of home that they imagine that they are "little tin gods on wheels." The wife may not be entirely deceived, but love and loyalty cover up a multitude of sins and the father continues to be held up as a model of virtue.

Public opinion, however, sizes men up for what they are worth, and seldom makes a mistake, and the boys in the home are not slow to recognize their father's failings, long before they arrive at the age of young manhood.
And so it often happens that the "plus and minus" sign, referred to in the initiate, means more than simply figures or speech.

The average boy is destined to become either a better or a worse man than his father because there is no
standing still; in this progressive age,
of which he is a part.

The average father finds satisfaction
in telling his boy what a hard time he had in his boyhood days, how few advantages he enjoyed, and how he worked from "sunup to sundown" for his board and a scanty wardrobe.

The boy is fed up on so much of this kind of nourishment that he sometimes wonders how his father ever made a place for himself, and if he does any thinking, he compares his own life of comparative ease and greater opportunity and decides that he ought to be a better man than his father.

Cleero is sometimes a mighty good teacher. If the father has an appetite for drink, and comes home
occasionally the worse for the habit,
the boy compares him with the neighbor boy across the street and recognizes his father's weakness.

If he is shiftless and neglects his home and his business, the boy is not slow to discover that he is a poor representative of the men who succeed,
and the lesson impresses him.

The new generation, just coming over the top to enter the arena of active life, is confronted by a problem which is as new to the fathers as it is to the boys. The response to the call of duty has made men of our boys ever night. No generation has ever developed so rapidly.

Simpson recently wrote a story on the "blooms of the war." The title was so startling that it attracted attention.
The writer claimed that one of the bloomers was found in the development of young manhood. The boys had been made to half at a short time, and possibly for the first time many of them had been taught to think.

It has done more than that for the boys, because it has kindled the fires of patriotism—which had been permitted to smoulder and the love of country is again demanding the attention which it deserves.

The fathers of the country are well on the road to destiny, but the boy's career is changed and what the future
may contain for him is problematic. A large plus sign has confronted him in the pathway and whether he was planning to be a better man than his father, or whether he was drifting away to be a worse
man without planning, the plus sign makes him a soldier or a candidate for military service at the call of his country.

The war means more than this to the boys of the new generation, as well as to all of us. It means a new adjustment of life and a new outlook
on the broad field of humanity.

The long era of prosperity which blessed us as a people, made of us a nation of spenders. We were not only extravagant, but we were reckless and wasteful. The luxuries of life became necessities, and money slipped through our fingers like water through a sieve.

This sort of extravagance, which ran riot, developed selfishness, and our wants became so numerous that we sought to gratify them without regard to justice or consequences.

The great white way of New York
was duplicated in every large city,
and while the old world was a charnel house and death and sorrow was a common heritage, we were so bent on pleasure and selfish gratification

that we forgot the war, and all the suffering it entailed.

The nation was fast becoming a modern Sodom and Gomorrah. It was ripe for the shock which came to us with the declaration of war with Germany and the sobering influences exerted are already being felt in all parts of the country.

From a nation of spenders we are fast becoming a nation of savers. The conservation of food is developing conservation all along the line, and economy is the watchword. Many of us are taking time to think and the experience is so novel that we are not yet fully adjusted to it.

The war is also bringing us nearer together as a people. It is broadening our sympathies and giving a new dignity to labor and the men who toll.
The sons of the rich and the poor, of the educated and uneducated, are sharing poor luck in the same training camps, and may soon be touching elbows in the same trenches.

There is no aristocracy about patriotism, and as the war progresses the crucible of common sacrifice and common suffering will consume the cross, and manhood will be the hall-mark of the nation, regardless of birth or environment.

This is not a rich man's war, yet
the sons of the wealthy are well represented at the front. Neither is it a man's war, although the representation is larger, because of a larger constituency at home.

This is everybody's war, your war and mine, and we have no right to shirk responsibility. Some of the new war taxes became effective the first of the month, among them the eight per cent tax on railroad tickets which cost more than thirty-five cents.

Two or three men boarded Milwaukee
train Thursday morning where the fare to their destination was sixty cents. They had tickets for a half way station where they bought again to save the tax. Perhaps they thought they were beating the railroad, but they were not. They were beating their government out of a nickel.

That sort of spirit will never win the war. If this class of men have any boys there is a good chance for a plus sign along the lines of patriotism and loyalty.

Just Folks

UNKIND KINDNESS.

It is not kindness when you give a pair of darts to me. Though I am fond of canvas backs I do not deserve 'em. It does not fill the home with joy to have me enter there. And place upon the table white a plump and feathered pair.

It does not wreath her face in smiles
such tributes to receive. Nor does she speak in gratitude.
The maid starts to grin. She does not praise the friend who gives, nor wish him better luck. But suddenly she says she'll bet his wife won't clean a duck.

The maid observes my precious gift and curls her lips with scorn and talks about the work she's planned to do tomorrow more.

"Ain't you lucky," she says to me,
"what I'll have time to dress
Them ducks for you tomorrow night,
you've got another guess."

And thus from kindness sorrow comes from friendship, discontent.

The gift intended to delight, creates an argument. Ungraciously at him who gives those ducks, this woman sees no

their feathers off.

A LITTLE SPICE OF LIFE.
I was standing in the big railroad station. The other afternoon, near the information desk, When I saw a young man and woman enter the station. She put her arms around his neck and kissed him.

It was one of those lingering ones.
Then they looked at each other and sighed.

Then they did it all over again and she hurried away in one direction
and he in another.

It was romance, surely. He was leaving

For the front and she would not see him for

A long time, and my old non-skid
heat was touched.

A Red Cap, near me, chuckled. "Har-
har," he said.

"Why laugh?" I asked. "That young fellow

is probably going to war."

"Wah, nuffin,'" replied the Red Cap.

body—but not me.

129 MEMBERS TOTAL FOR TODAY'S DRIVE

Y. M. C. A. Reports Encouraging Gains Made Today in the Annual Membership Drive.

"Progressing favorably." This short sentence today emanated from the Y. M. C. A. headquarters in regard to the membership drive which is now on. C. R. Bearmore, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., said: "Up to noon today one hundred and twenty-nine additional members have joined the corps, which now brings the total Y. M. C. A. membership up to three hundred and sixty-four members. This report is very gratifying and shows the esteem in which the Y. M. C. A. is held by the young and old in Janesville."

Mr. Baines reported forty-seven sustaining subscriptions up to noon today and said that he had quite a number on the list who would probably subscribe before the campaign closed.

In a letter Mr. Baines has received from his nephew, Fred Pauly, a member of the United States Marine corps, from Walla Walla, Washington, and who is now stationed at Quantico, Virginia, the young man writes in part: "The Y. M. C. A. certainly goes wonders for the entertainment of the enlisted men, six nights a week movies one night a week vaudeville and on Sunday church. They furnish writing material and current magazines with an immense reading room and various other things. It cannot be too highly commended for the interest it takes in the welfare of the men for we could hardly get along without it now that we have had an opportunity to avail ourselves of its many comforts."

Midday noon another report will be given at the Y. M. C. A. where the men will meet to "talk things over."

FRANCES INGRAM IN PLEASING RECITAL ON FRIDAY EVENING

Over Three Hundred People Were Present at First of a Series of Recitals Given by the Apollo Club

Accepting the applause of the audience as a criterion of their appreciation of the singing of Miss Frances Ingram, noted contralto, who appeared in the first of a series of recitals to be given by the Apollo club, here, as a certainty, that she is one of the stars, and of such a quality that those present were astonished at her masterful command of the tones.

Mrs. Ingram possesses a voice of beautiful quality and with the very clear and distinct enunciation of the words which made her appearance most enjoyable throughout the evening. Her clear, strong and hearty applause of the audience, which forced her to return several times for encores, evinced the fact that she met with the entire approval of those present.

The songs which she sang were of such a nature as to give her an opportunity of making the full use of her musical quality, and the variety of her singing was the wide range which she is able to reach. For a contralto she has a wonderful range of notes and the numerous songs rendered proved this fact very conclusively.

Due to the wishes of many of the people present she deviated from the original program as planned so that also could sing some of the more favorite songs which the audience will request, and give her talents to. As one of the encores she sang, "The Little Silver Ring," which was beautiful and the rendition gave her an opportunity of showing her dramatic talents.

In addition to possessing a wonderful voice Miss Ingram has the ability to put feeling into the words which were, finding where added greatly to the selections chosen. On being recalled to the platform during the second act of her program Miss Ingram sang the French national song, the "Marseillaise," with the entire audience standing.

One of the largest audiences which has ever attended a recital given by the Apollo club was present last evening which further shows the great local following of music held towards the noted contralto.

As the final number on the program Miss Ingram led the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" with all joining in.

MYERS THEATER.

"STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!" Irving Berlin's Latest and Greatest Success.

"Stop! Look! Listen!" a musical comedy in three acts and many changes of scenes, with music and lyrics by Irving Berlin, and direct from the Globe theater, New York City, will be presented at the Myers theater Sunday evening, Nov. 11.

"Stop! Look! Listen!" a title by the way taking several breaths to say, has been most handsomely produced. Several of its scenes, notably the sunny strand at Honolulu, and the faintly spot down the Greenway, are examples of the best. Not the least of the good things promised is the famous beauty chorus, which is a riot in the bathing melody entitled "Take Off a Little Bit More," in which the girls continue to comply with the request until, as the chorus puts it, "We can't take off any more."

ILLITERATE INDIANS ARE TAUGHT IN CAMP

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 3—More than 400 enlisted men in the national army at Camp Travis can neither read, write nor speak the English language, and their military education must start from the "ground floor." For they can't make themselves understand just yet, all the training of men means. They are mostly Indians from the remote and mountainous regions of Colorado and Mexicans from country precincts of Texas. They are so distributed in the various military units that it is close to comrades who may act as interpreters for them while in the army schoolhouse, or during their first lessons in English and history, reinforced by geography, with the war maps of the world in colors and characters denoting battles.

As the final number on the program Miss Ingram led the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" with all joining in.

The Sunday play—"They're Off"—with Enid Bennett in the star part, was a southern story of an impoverished landowner obliged to sell his farm and took up quarters in the neighboring stable with his wife, his mother's bible and his father's sword for company. Enid and her wealthy father live in the house and when she discovers the poverty of the young man she plans to help him. She enters her own horse in a steeple chase and rides him to victory, so that her father pays a fabulous price to possess her. At the Majestic a fine picture was given the first part of the week, with Maxine Elliott as star. It was called " Fighting Odds." It was the story of a wealthy manufacturer inveigled into leaving himself to be made the president of a consolidated company. By a systematic plan of the stock exchange the company was ruined, and the man was imprisoned on a raft charge. Then Maxine Elliott, as the wife of the wronged man, comes to the fore, and by making friends and acquaintances of the villain in the case and following him to meet his love to her, secures evidence of the innocence of her husband. She gave an artistic interpretation of the part and incidentally displayed some wonderful gowns.

"Stranded in Arcady" gave Mrs. Vernon Castle an opportunity to display her athletic ability and her powers as a swimmer, rather than art as a dancer. The story is to do with a plot which leads a navalist and a girl engineer (Mrs. Vernon Castle), who were total strangers to each other, stranded together in the woods of Canada. Various thrilling adventures, wherein Mrs. Castle displayed more vim than the luckless novelist, ended by his falling in love with the energetic young woman. Their rescue from real danger and their safe return in a legacy left to them, was the happy outcome of the story. The Pathé weekly showed scenes in the Philippines.

Iroquois, by the Look of That Warrior.

It sounded so close at hand the fellow could scarcely have been five yards away. Another voice answered, and we were aware of bodies, stealing along through the wood; there was a faint rustling of dead leaves, and the occasional swish of a branch. We crouched low in the trail, fairly holding our breath, every nerve tense. There was no sound from below, but in the other direction one warrior—I could see the thin outline of his naked figure—passed within easy reach of my outstretched hand.

Assured that all had passed beyond hearing D'Artigny rose to his feet, and assisted me to rise, his hand still grasping mine.

"Iroquois, by the look of that warrior," he whispered, "and enough of them to mean mischief."

"Twas the tongue of the Tuscaroras," I answered. "My father taught me a little of it years ago. The first words spoken were a warning to be still; the others answered that the white men are all asleep."

"And I am not sure but that is true. If De Tonty was in command the walls would be well guarded, but De Baugis and Cassion know nothing of Indian war."

"You believe it to be an assault?"

"It hath the look; 'tis not Indian nature to gather thus at this night hour, without a purpose. But, pour, there is little they can do against that stockade of logs for all their numbers. It is our duty to be well away by daylight."

The remaining distance to the water's edge was not far—a direct descent amid a litter of rocks, shadowed by great trees. Nothing opposed our passage, nor did we hear any sound from the savages concealed in the forest above. D'Artigny led the way along the shore until we reached the log hut. Its door stood open; the canoe was gone.

CHAPTER XXIII.

We Meet Surprise.

Not until we had fed carefully from wall to wall did we admit our disappointment. There were no overshadowing trees here, and what small glimmer of light came from the dull skies found reflection on river and rock, so that we could perceive each other, and gain dim view of our surroundings.

Of the canoe there was absolutely no trace, and, if arms had been hidden there also, they had likewise disappeared. The very fact that the door stood wide open, its wooden lock broken, told the story clearly. I remained silent, staring about through the semi-darkness of the interior, rendered speechless by a feeling of utter helplessness. D'Artigny, after an utterance of disappointment, felt his way along the walls; as he came back to the open door our eyes met, and he must have read despair in mine, for he smiled encouragingly.

"Swept bare, little girl," he said.

"Not so much as an ounce of powder left. The savages got here before us. It seems. Never mind; we shall have to travel a ways on woodcraft, and it will not be the first wilderness journey I have made without arms. Did De Tonty mention to you where he believed the Iroquois were in hiding?"

"No, monsieur—are they Indians?"

"Yes; the river tribes, the most loyal of all to La Salle. It was one of their villages we saw on the bank of the stream as we approached the fort from the west. I told Boisronet that it stood there deserted, but not much or waters, and the chatter of some night bird. Yet some instinct of the woods held the man motionless, listening. A twig cracked to our left, and then a voice spoke, low and rumbling.

destroyed, and it was our judgment

the inhabitants were hiding among the river bluffs. Without canoes they could not travel far, and are probably concealed out yonder. If we can find them our greatest peril is past."

"They are friendly?"

"Ay, and have never shed white blood. I know them well, and with leadership they would be a match even for the Iroquois. De Tonty led them once against these same warriors, and they fought like fiends. Come, we will follow the stream, and see if we cannot find trace of their covert."

It was but a cluster of rocks where the hut stood, and a few yards below

we found the forest creeping down to the very bank of the river. The sky

had lightened above us, the obscuring

clouds opening to let the silver gleam of stars through, and we paused a moment gazing back and upward at the east rock on which perched the he-leaguered fort. We could dimly perceive the vague outline of it silhouetted against the lighter arch of sky. In massive gloom and silence it seemed to dominate the night, the grim forest sweeping up to its very walls. Not a gleam of light appeared; not a sound reached us. I felt D'Artigny's arm about me. "I would that I really knew what was going on yonder 'neath the screen of trees," he said gravely. "Some Indian trick, perchance, which it might be in my power to circumvent—at least bear to the lad fair warning."

"You would risk life for that?"

"Ay, my own readily. That is a lesson of the wilderness: the duty of a comrade. But for your presence I should be climbing the hill, seeking to learn the purpose of those savages—else I were no true soldier of France."

"What think you their purpose is, monsieur?"

"An attack in force at dawn. Those who passed us were heavily armed, and crept forward stealthily, striped and painted for war. There were other parties, no doubt, creeping up through the woods from all sides. 'Tis my thought the hour has struck for them to make their great effort. They have scattered the friendly Indians, killed them, or driven them in terror down the river. Their villages have been destroyed. Now all the warriors who have been at that business have returned, filled with blood lust, and eager to strike at the French."

"But they cannot win? Surely they cannot capture the fort, monsieur? Why, it is all rock?"

"On three sides—yes; but to the south there is ample space for attack in force. Those woods yonder would conceal a thousand savages within a few hundred yards of the fort gates, and what of the defense? Opposing them is one hundred and fifty feet of stockade, protected at best by fifty rifles. There are no more in the fort,

officers, Indians, and all; and Boisronet says scarcely a dozen rounds of powder and ball to a man. If the Iroquois know this—and why should they not?—'twill be no great feat of arms to batter their way in. I would do that which is right, Adele, if I saw clearly."

I clung to his hands, staring back still at the grim outline of the silent fort. I understood his thoughts, his desire to aid his comrades; but for a moment, my mind was a blank. I could not let him go alone to almost certain death. No, nor would he abandon me on such a mission! Was there no other way by which we could serve? Suddenly a thought crept into my mind.

"Monsieur," I asked breathlessly, "where do you suppose those Iroquois Indians to be?"

"Back from the river, in a glen of caves and rocks."

"How far from here?"

"Four or five miles; there is a trail

from the mouth of the creek."

"And you know the way? and there might be many warriors there? they will remember you, and obey your orders?"

He straightened up, aroused as the full meaning of my questioning oc-urred to him.

"Ay, there is a chance there, if we find them in time, and in force enough to make foray. Sacré! I know not why such thought has not come to me before. Could we but fall on those devils from the rear in surprise, even with a third of their number, they would run like cats. Mon Dieu! I thank you for the thought!"

We plunged into the forest, no longer endeavoring to advance silently, but inspired with a desire to achieve our goal as soon as possible. At the mouth of a stream entering the river, D'Artigny picked me up in his arms and waded across. On the opposite bank he sought eagerly on hands and knees for the old trace he dimly remembered.

At last he stood erect.

"Ay, lass, it's here to be easily followed. What hour do you make it now?"

Dinner Stories

Crash! Bang! Wallop!

Mrs. Newbold rushed out of the dining-room and saw Sara Ann sitting among the ruins of her best china.

For an instant she was speechless with horror and anger. Then she cried:

"Sarah Ann, what on earth have you done?"

Sarah Ann retrieved her cup from a sea of gravy, and grunted:

"It's the dinner things, mum! And oh, inum, what a good thing I hadn't washed up 'em up!"

The grown people entertained the callers, while the baby crept on the floor. The grownups paid more attention to the callers than to the baby and suddenly there was a loud bump and a wild yell. It seemed to come from the direction of the piano.

"Oh, the baby has hurt himself!" cried the young mother. "Run quick, dear."

The young father had already dashed plowward. He dropped on his knees and groped under the instrument for his injured
